CURRICULUM

SESSION 1 9:45 am – 10:45 am

Perspectives in Law: Trafficking in Persons as a Crime

This course will address the crime of human trafficking and how best to identify and understand the vulnerabilities of victims of human trafficking. Once a victim has been identified, it immediately requires a multi-disciplinary approach to meet the needs of the victim and the ongoing investigation. These investigations have commonalities regionally and involve specialized professionals to assist throughout the process to prosecution. Cases prosecuted in the 20th Judicial Circuit of Florida will be discussed along with the importance of evidence collected by law enforcement.

SESSION 2 11:00 am – 12:00 pm

Assessing Vulnerability & Trauma in Human Trafficking: Case Study Opioids

This course examines trauma-informed approaches to human trafficking cases as well as the underlying factors that contribute to vulnerabilities that can be exploited by traffickers. The instructor will contextualize these issues through the lens of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children (CSEC). The instructor will also discuss the intersections between trafficking in persons and opioids, including how traffickers might use opioids as a mechanism of control or coercion.

SESSION 3 1:05 pm – 2:05 pm

Labor Trafficking: A Collaborative Response to Immigration Issues of Victims and Survivors

Trafficking for purposes of forced labor/involuntary servitude is perhaps the most violent expression in a spectrum of labor abuses that many workers face. This course will address vulnerabilities faced by immigrant workers, whether “in” or “out” of lawful immigration status, that lead to trafficking-in-person of foreign-born workers. Using case examples and current events the course will address components of the climate of fear and provide an overview of immigration related issues present in labor trafficking cases. The course will also address immigration relief available to foreign-born trafficked persons and how to access such remedies.

SESSION 4 2:15 pm – 3:15 pm

Public-Private Partnerships: A Multidisciplinary Imperative to Combat Human Trafficking

Strong partnerships across the public and private sectors are essential to combat trafficking in persons and support survivors as they rebuild their lives. During this course, panelists will share insights and perspectives from their firsthand experiences working in the field, including the importance of multidisciplinary collaborations. Panelists will discuss why the local community truly needs all hands on deck to end human trafficking in southwest Florida and beyond.

Crystal Lee Hamilton
Consultant, CrisLee Consulting Firm
Survivor Leader

After surviving sexual exploitation, Crystal Lee is fighting back by empowering others as she combats against the exploitation of people. Specializing in helping children, young adults, and single mothers in the sex industry.

As a young mother coming out of the aftermath of a destructive relationship, Crystal believed she had found a more promising future with a medical doctor, who courted her and her infant son when she was only 21. However, over the next four years, she was forced into sex trafficking by him under the guise of an ‘escort’ service he operated. After escaping and staying in hiding for a decade, she now lives bold and empowered.

Through deep healing and truly connecting to a higher source of power, she found a calling to impact the lives of others trapped in the industry. She assists and equips young women who have been sexually exploited through domestic sex trafficking by actively going into juvenile detention centers, county jails, mental health facilities, group homes, and working with the local Department of Children and Families to speak the truth about the vulnerability and danger these populations face daily.

Crystal has made a direct impact in the community through resilience sharing, living by example, and coaching survivors back into society and into living into their potential. She is currently awaiting her dream of running a nonprofit with the hopes of making an even greater impact with strides to help to heal, connect, enrich, and serve this population by decreasing the vulnerabilities they face.
